

A. That's the only time I remember.

Q. Don't you know that he was there two or three times?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember what shoes you had on Thursday, when you dressed up and went out?

A. No. A new pair of shoes practically like this.

Q. Had on a new pair of shoes?

A. Yes. The others were in better repair.

Q. What makes you recollect?

A. Because I know. I sent the other two pairs to be mended and this is one of the pair.

Q. To whom?

A. William Mansfield. That's where I buy my shoes. He simply puts it on the bill and sends it up to the bank.

Q. You are certain you had a new pair of shoes on that night, because that's the only pair available that night?

A. That is one of the pair.

Q. You had on?

A. No. One I had mended. You know what shoes are. These are much easier.

Q. When you went home Thursday night, after going to the church with your sister, do you remember the dogs barking when you came home?

A. I won't be positive of that.

Q. You mean that you do not remember whether they barked?

A. Yes. I was too busy keeping up with my sister.

Q. Did you hear any one take a car out of the garage after you went to bed?

A. No.
